Miss Anna's Leap.

A woman named Annie Howard, living on Jefferson street near Second, started up stairs to her room, last night, and managed to get nearly to the top when she came down again a good deal faster than she went up—something like a two-ounce tennis ball for a forty-pound ball. She made so much noise by her sudden descent that a passer-by was constrained to observe, in the language of Mark Twain, "All down but nine; set 'em up in the other alley, pard." Miss Annie was arrested, went down in the bottom of her old stocking for ten dollars in gold and put up a forfeit.
She appeared to-day in a low-neck dress and flowing sleeves. She also had some flowing language and flowing tears. Nevertheless, she left a five-dollar gold piece.

Oscar Wilde's Lecture.

Seats for the coming lecture of Oscar Wilde, announced for next Monday night, are to be sold inside of the theater to-morrow morning at 9 o'clock, the highest bidder taking first choice, and so on down as long as the demand lasts, after which the remainder of the tickets will be sold in the regular way.
The New York agent of Oscar makes the following announcement: "The visit of Mr. Wilde to this country has been an event of great interest this season. He came here chiefly to show the beginning, growth and real aim of the so-called aesthetic movement in England, of which he is by common consent considered to be a leader. He has carried out this purpose by delivering an address entitled 'The English Renaissance,' devoted mainly to an exposition of this new social movement. This address has been listened to by the largest lecture audiences which have been seen since the days of Charles Dickens, and has awakened a wide interest in the poet and his topic, an interest which is daily becoming stronger. At the suggestion of many friends, he has prepared a second lecture, devoted to what may be called the practical application of his theory to everyday life, being the principles of aesthetic art as applied generally to the wide range of art ornamentation, and includes remarks upon the present phase of decorative art in America as
